

GREAT IS RAWHIDE

Four Tonopahns Visit New Camp and Pronounce It Most Marvelous - Cannot Say Too Much in Praise of Wonderful Showings.

Four men came back last night from Rawhide, and enthusiasm would but weakly convey their sentiments regarding the camp. They could not say enough in praise of the wonderful showings that they saw. And these men are all of different temperaments, and men who rarely enthuse over anything in the way of a gold or silver mine. The party was composed of Zeb Kendall, Bob Govan, George Thatcher and Roger Dougherty.

The first and last named of the party were here in the early days and both had lucky leases on Mount Oddie. They saw this camp flourish and prosper, and grow from a lot of leases to one of the greatest camps in the world. They both saw Goldfield spring up, and then grow into what it is, and words fail them when they attempt to describe what they saw in Rawhide and what they think of the camp. Bob Govan has been nearly everywhere that a camp has reared its head, from the Arctic to Mexico, and he says that there never was anything like Rawhide. George Thatcher has been a mining lawyer, and has lived much in mining camps, and he says that one is struck with wonder after an exploration of the camp, and that when he gets away from it, the wonder becomes still greater.

Zeb Kendall is one of the hardest men to startle out of an expression of enthusiasm, and he has made and lost fortunes in mining, but he is lost for expressions to suit his feelings in regard to the camp.

"I heard such fabulous stories about the camp before I went there," said he, "that I was prepared to see a pretty good camp, whose praises had been much exaggerated by those who are interested. But there were no exaggerations about any of the stories. The most enthusiastic man who came from there did not tell half the truth. I don't see how the camp could be exaggerated. It is a young camp yet, but she is a lusty youngster, and a mighty rich one. I walked around the camp in a circle, for about fifteen miles, and at nearly every two hundred feet, I struck a spot from where the gold was being taken out."

"The Tiger and the Royal is an eye opener. I thought that Bert Gillespie was peddling the bull, when he talked of it, but I did him an injustice, and he didn't do his property justice; he didn't tell the half of it. It has a magnificent showing, and reminds me very much of the Mizpah ledge, with the formation of which it is identical. All over the country there is the big brown porphyry, which we know carries the values."

"Of course no one can say anything as to the future of the camp, but so far as we can see now, it is the best that I have ever seen. Are there ledges there? Well, I should say there were. In the Kearns lease they have a ledge which is now twelve or fourteen feet, and they tell me that the whole thing will go better than $200 a ton. Kearns is shipping twenty tons a day to Goldfield. And the Kearns lease is only one property where the ore is being sacked and stacked up on the hillside. I have never before enthused over any mining camp, but Rawhide has got me, and I am going back there in a few days. People are coming in all the time from Schurz and other points, three or four autos getting in there every day. There is not much money there, but just wait for a month or so, and you may not have to wait that long. With the ore in sight at present, and with the depth that has been obtained, Rawhide has several years of life before it, to say the least."

"She beats anything that I have ever seen," said Bob Govan, "and I think that I have been to all of them. What is it that strikes me most favorably about the camp? Why, the ore that is sacked on the hills, and the gold and silver that is being taken out of the shafts. Rawhide has the best chance of anything that I have ever seen, and while nobody can tell what the future will bring, there is no doubt that the camp is good for a long time yet; she is only a baby. As soon as you strike the camp, you say she's a good one. It is in the air, and then when you go to look, it is in the ground, too. You find the gold being taken out from any number of leases. There are a great many men there who are working. Of course the majority of them are working for themselves and their partners who staked them, and there is little money in the camp. But the

MARKET TOOK DOWNWARD TURN

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—The growing instability of the stock market at the advanced level of prices which has been in evidence during all of this week, culminated today in a reaction of some violence. The downward course of prices, unaccompanied by any news, pointed to a change from conditions which have prevailed while prices were being advanced. The early movement of prices was erratic and feverish, with a suspicion of manipulative measures to sustain prices. These were apparently abandoned as the day advanced and the whole list gave way. The gross earnings of thirty-one railroads for the first week in January show a decrease of 12.81 per cent compared with the corresponding week of last year. Bonds were heavy.

WRECKAGE CAUSES ANXIETY FOR SHIP

(By Associated Press.)
VICTORIA, B. C., Jan. 16.—A dispatch received by the Marine Department from Estevan wireless station, says a quantity of wreckage, cabin fittings, doors, belts, lifeboat fittings, and small imitation life buoy lettered with pencil, "Hartfield, Liverpool," have been found at Hesquiat, near Estevan Point. The general opinion is that while the news will cause anxiety for the safety of the Hartfield, indications are that her decks have been swept during the storm. Mariners state that spars would have been included in the wreckage had the vessel gone ashore and pounded to pieces. The British ship Hartfield left Valparaiso on October 26th for Port Townsend.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16.—Edward S. Whitaker, inspector of police, entered the office of the Morning World here tonight and fired two shots at Joseph Loveque, the editor. Neither of the shots took effect. The shooting tonight followed several attacks upon Whitaker in the editorial and news columns of the World. Whitaker, accompanied by several detectives, entered the editorial rooms of the World shortly after 6 o'clock, and the inspector started for Loveque, who was talking at the time with a young woman reporter. Blows were exchanged and it was then that Whitaker drew a revolver and fired two shots. One of the reporters, who rushed to the editor's aid, struck the inspector's arm and caused the shots to go wild.

Despite the fact that he was elected president of the National Association by a unanimous vote, Dr. J. M. Wilson of Douglas, Arizona, declined to accept the honor, because of his personal and political friendship for United States Senator Warren, whom the convention refused to consider for re-election because of the fact that the Wyoming Senator had gone on record as favoring the forestry range policies of President Roosevelt. NEVADA GIRL ENDS LIFE IN SALT LAKE

SALT LAKE CITY, Jan. 16.—Beginning with a secret marriage the wreck of a young girl's life moved quickly to its tragic end in the gas-filled room of a State street resort today. Surrounded by pictures of herself, taken in childhood, Bessie Conley, formerly of Reno, Nev., died from asphyxiation and the theory of suicide is generally accepted. Until two months ago she was Bessie Hammond. Her parents idolized her and she was engaged to marry a prosperous business man. She met Joseph Conley, keeper of a saloon at Cobre, Nev. Her infatuation for him overcame the opposition of her parents and she left her home, taking a position as stenographer in Ogden, Utah. Her mother followed her to Ogden and was preparing to take her to California, when the girl slipped away, met Conley and was married to him. That was two months ago. A month later Conley assaulted her and beat her in the street at Ogden. In another week the hopeless bride was living with a drug clerk in Salt Lake. He lacked the means to support her and she was forced to the last downward step ten days ago. Her eighteen years of life closed with a night of mad frivolity and the turning on of a gas jet.
